NAVIGATING CHANGE

FROM A CHRISTIAN PERSPECTIVE

We all face many changes throughout our lives. We change; our environment changes; new challenges appear and old values are challenged. The First Letter of Peter teaches some important principles about how to navigate change as a Christian – where we need flexibility and where we must stand firm. As we examine its teaching we shall find ourselves strengthened and stimulated by its radically different perspective.

Wednesday morning will feature 'Praxis' workshops – practical 'how to' sessions covering issues in this season of life including: changing family dynamics, biblical advocacy, financial planning and stewardship, later life theological training and social media for ministry.

This conference is for senior clinicians who are retired or approaching retirement in the next five years, as well as senior clinicians thinking of stepping down in some way in their current roles.

SPEAKER

David Jackman

David has been married to Heather for 49 years and they have two married children and four grandchildren. After graduating from Cambridge,

David served for six years as Universities Secretary for the UCCF (then IVF). Theological Studies at Trinity College, Bristol, preceded his appointment to Above Bar Church, Southampton, where he ministered for 15 years. In 1991, he became the Founder Director of the Cornhill Training Course, a ministry of the Proclamation Trust, of which he was later President.

In retirement, he continues to preach, produce training materials, write books and conduct preaching workshops in the UK and overseas.

SEMINARS

Please choose your first two preferences and one reserve choice when booking on this brochure or online: cmf.org.uk/events

1

Burning brightly or flickering out?

Let's discuss together how we can use our influence, experience and resources to share the good news of Jesus with others, with open hands, hearts, minds, lives, homes, families and diaries.

SPEAKER

Stephanie Moss is CMF Associate Staffworker for Workplace Evangelism and a GP in Birmingham.

2

The most productive decade of your life?

People speak of the later years of life being the culmination of the accumulated wisdom, training and gifts discovered over years. Indeed, your 60s (closely followed by the 50s) are supposed to be your most productive decade! But what does this look like when you're considering cutting back or stopping work? What specific doors are open to you as a Christian with your medical training? Come and hear about opportunities and share what's on your heart with others.

SPEAKER

John Greenall is CMF National Field Director and a paediatrician in Bedfordshire.

3

Doing what only you can do

Gone are the days when global mission meant going long-term early in your career. Now opportunities abound to travel short (and long) term in the later years of life. How can you get involved? What experiences might you share with others? How might you encourage the next generation to keep global mission at the forefront of their hearts and minds?

SPEAKER

Fi McLachlan is Head of CMF Global. She has a background in social work and management in the social care and health sector and has served in mission with Interserve.

4

Being salt and light in the public square

Senior clinicians have many opportunities to use their experience to influence public policy, especially when reducing clinical sessions or approaching retirement. College and BMA committees, supporting and training younger members and media input are some ideas that we will discuss.

SPEAKER

Mark Pickering is CMF Chief Executive and a prison GP. Originally from Yorkshire, he lives in London with his wife Rachael, who is also a prison GP, both in the UK and overseas.

5

The past is the gateway to the future, not the obstacle

Many people look forward to retirement and change of pace in later life. For some of us things are more complex. Failure, unfulfilled dreams and disappointments cast a shadow over the future. In this seminar, we will be exploring how we interpret our past in the light of God's Word to discover his plans for renewed fruitfulness.

SPEAKER

Brian Hopkins, an inner-city GP in Sheffield for years, is now in a new phase, working part-time with renewed energy and passion for CMF and PRIME whilst deepening friendships.

Receiving and giving good pastoral care

What does good pastoral care look like? What are the truly Christian distinctives and do they matter? What pastoral needs do we have at the end of our careers and how are they best met? What can I do to help others and give them the benefit of life experience? In this seminar we will be exploring these questions and looking at how good pastoral care can work to restore, refresh and enable us all to serve Christ better.

SPEAKER

Steve Sturman is CMF Associate Head of Graduate Ministries and a consultant neurologist specialising in neurorehabilitation. He is involved in local church pastoral ministry and is transitioning into the 'third age'.
